Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 29 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rather windy on Wednesday. Sunny spells with a few showers.

Today:
Rather windy with bright or sunny spells, along with a few showers. The showers become more isolated through the afternoon with sunny spells becoming more prevalent. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Tonight:
Skies clearing into the evening, with long clear spells developing, and turning chilly as winds ease. Increasing cloud will reach the west before daybreak, but staying dry. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Thursday:
Thickening cloud and strengthening winds will spread east during the morning, with outbreaks of rain gradually following through the afternoon and evening. The odd heavy burst of rain likely. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
A very unsettled spell with showers or longer spells of rain, these sometimes heavy or thundery. Occasionally windy, especially over the weekend, with risk of coastal gales, possibly severe.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.